KHRUSHCHEV BERLIN SPEECH EXCERPT

It is perfectly natural to ask what will be the policy in the next six or eight months of the Soviet Union and of all Socialist countries which belong to the Warsaw Treaty. I cannot speak for all Socialist countries. We should like to discuss this question with the governments of the friendly states, and we shall do so, as I said yesterday on arrival in Berlin.

[But (word indistinct) is beyond doubt that the view one can take of the policy of the USSR and the other countries of the Warsaw Pact.] We shall do nothing that might aggravate the international situation and take us back to the dark time of the cold war.
